Yeah honestly this is only going to make it worse.

It's not like halting trading effects the value of the stocks, best case scenario you can argue it's just keeping people from panic selling but to be honest I don't think that pausing the market will actually keep that from happening

Gradually reduce the dogpits until you suck less than 11 niggerdicks and take less than 5 BBCs up your ass per week.
Eventually ween off the BBC and start replacing it with dildos.

The market literally CANNOT be halted. All that happens now is, during the break, everyone sells. Then when it goes live again, half of those sell orders (or more) can't be filled with opposite buy orders.

Price keeps plunging and many sellers are unable to sell, as they would be if it was just left live. So even though trading 'stops', the freefall is still happening and the break has no real effect except more panic.

And who payed them to do that?

Could it be that the ACTUAL government is billionaire capitalists who pay off congressman and impose laws that cement their places as monopolies? There is no such thing as democracy under capitalism. And then you can just say "it's not real free market" but that's the thing. The free market destroys itself with its own contradictions.

What you are witnessing is socialism for the rich and rugged individualism for the poor.

>Corporations pay their fair share in revenue and return the 2.3 Trillion tax cut.
Really now? Do I really even need to explain?

If we even did as much as forcing corporations to allow the workers to elect people to the board, all of this would change.

Oil production is up. That means anyone with money in oil stocks or oil futures is getting murdered. Because people are retarded, everyone else is panic-selling random shit that won't be affected. Meanwhile Big Ag, anything that gets transported on a truck boat or plane, and manufacturing is going to see their profits soar, which means that all the retards selling stocks in those things are going to get Europoor while the people buying them while prices are low will become rich and be able to buy all the premium sexbots they want to keep them company while the flu kills a few old people who were dead anyway from falling and breaking their hips.

It's free in the sense that you're free to purchase and liquidate within the strict confines of the conglomerate of central banks which control the entire financial economy.
Just like you're free to speak your mind as long as you don't say naughty things, and are free to associate with any group or any organisation as long as it doesn't oppose the establishment.

kek, all the middle managers will be 28-35 year olds who were still in college or barely getting started in the workplace in 2008. They've had 10 years of hubris define their whole career so far. Poor babies are gonna get smacked hard when reality comes calling and they find out they're not specially talented financial geniuses just because they've jumped on the back and profited off the biggest QE operation and stock market inflation in history.

you fucking clueless plebs. Stocks are a longterm investment. Stop paying attention to daily, monthly or even yearly changes. Changes per decade and even longer are the relevant changes.
